NEEDS TRUTH FIRST OF ALL

COLLEGE STUDENT SEEKS FREEDOM, SPEAKER SAYS.

MONEY IS LEAST PAY

Dr. J. W. Searson, At Teachers Meeting, Declares That Educators Have Satisfaction of Service Rendered.

In a heart to heart talk with the teachers in attendance at the evening session of the Northwest Missouri Teachers Association in the College auditorium yesterday Dr. C. A. Phillips, professor of education, University of Missouri, and former dean of the Warrensburg State Teachers College, told what he considered to be the responsibilities to society that are peculiarly applicable to the college men and women.

Dr. Phillips took the place of Dr. J. H. Waters, editor of the weekly Kansas City Star, who was unable to fulfill his engagement due to illness.

The speech made by Dr. Phillips was built upon the motto over the door of the administration of the College building, "And the Truth Shall Make You Free." He discussed the necessity of knowing truth and the meaning of the phrase "to be free."

He told his hearers that it is very necessary in this democracy of ours for the college men and women to seek scientific truth and to spread it among others in order that all may realize the freedom which only truth and knowledge can guarantee to every individual.

College men and women must keep their minds open to all avenues leading to scientific truth and they must at all times be keenly conscious of the moral obligations to their fellow citizens which their advanced training places upon them, according to Dr. Phillips. At present, the amusements of the American people is based on commercial opportunities for material gains but the college men and women must assist in the work of making all forms of recreation be judged by the one thing, its wholesomeness.

"If youth is ever to be changed to a higher type of citizenship it is the college men and women who must accomplish it in America," was his parting statement to the teachers.

Searson on Golden Rule.

At the present time in America twenty-six great social organizations of international size are striving toward the establishment of a working application of the golden rule among the citizens of the world, according to Dr. J. W. Searson, professor of English, University of Nebraska, who was the second speaker on the evening program of the convention.

Dr. Searson prefaced his address by a few complimentary remarks on the courtesies and kindnesses extended to him during his stay here.

Only one and one-tenth per cent of the total bonded indebtedness of the forty-eight states is spent on educational work, Dr. Searson says, and he further gave it as his opinion that much of the bonded indebtedness is being wasted.

What does a teacher get in addition to her pay check was one of the questions the speaker hurled at his audience last night. In answer to his own question he said that the teacher gets also a sense of satisfaction in the knowing that she has done her part in community betterment.

The teacher also gains a settled consciousness that she is gaining an increased skill to serve the community as she goes on through her career, Dr. Searson said. The constant goal he set for the teachers in his talk was that of achieving a higher moral plane both for herself and for the entire community. Things material in the world may be purchased for cash in advance but the things spiritual must be bought on the life installment plan by the teacher and the benefits gained as time ripens their life work.

In recognition of the work of the ordinary classroom teacher Dr. Searson said that when the time comes, if it ever does, when we attempt to belittle her work, the entire school system will fail for she is a most vital part of that system.

Mrs. Elmer Hornbuckle and son, Howard, of Pickering returned Thursday night from a week's visit with relatives at Jamesport, Mo.

RAID MADE ON LOCKED ROOM

OFFICERS INTERRUPT PARTY OVER McMURRY GARAGE.

WILL ANALYZE LIQUOR

Most of Contents of Large Bottle Poured on Floor—Bob Moody and Four Others Present.

With a search warrant issued from the justice court of W. L. Johnson at the request of Prosecuting Attorney George Pat Wright, a raiding party composed of city and county officers last night visited a room over the McMurry garage at the northeast corner of the square.

The room was that of Bob Moody, who gives his occupation as truck driver, and others present were Ernest Riley, Russell Bagby, Alva Abbott and Carl Fisher. Abbott is from Elmo.

Both downstairs and upstairs doors were locked, and the occupants of the room were slow to answer the officers' demands for entrance, according to Sheriff Lowell B. Campbell. When they finally gained admission to Moody's room, according to the same officer, the raiders found that the contents of a one-gallon glass bottle had been poured upon the floor, but enough remained for the officers to send to chemists for analysis. Cards also were found, but no chips.

Curtains were tightly drawn over the windows, the officers reported.

No arrests have been made, pending the analysis of the contents of the gallon bottle.

Those in the raiding party were Sheriff Campbell, Chief of Police, B. F. Dougan, Constable Cabel Childress, Deputy Sheriff Harve England and Lloyd Heifner.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Glines and daughter, Edna, of Hopkins were shopping in Maryville today.

These words floated over the silent prayerful group of mourners as the casket of white and bronze was reverently lowered into the grave, banked with flowers, and the sod of Lebanon which had given Ralston to his adopted Indiana as governor and to the nation as United States Senator claimed its own.

Potato Growers in Three Counties of State Buy Trainload of Certified Seed in North

The biggest single event in the history of truck crop production in Missouri will occur next Tuesday, October 20, when a full trainload of northern grown, certified seed potatoes will be received at the town of Anglum over the Wabash railroad. The trainload will consist of thirty-five cars of certified cobblers from the Hollandale district of Minnesota. Each car will contain from 600 to 700 bushels of No. 1 potatoes, certified true to name, grown from selected and treated seed of high producing strains and found by rigid field inspection to be free from potato diseases.

The potato growers of St. Louis, St. Charles and Jefferson Counties have ordered this immense shipment of certified seed because they are convinced that the resulting crop will be worth at least $100,000 more than a crop grown from ordinary home-grown seed.

This belief is based on the results of thirty-five demonstrations conducted by potato growers in fourteen counties in 1924 in co-operation with the Extension Service of the Missouri College of Agriculture. Each carload of genuine certified northern grown seed potatoes which replaced ordinary seed in these demonstrations gave an increased return worth $2,299.00.

The average increase from certified seed was 59.8 bushels per acre; and a carload of seed potatoes will plant 50 acres. On this basis with each carload in the trainload that will reach St. Louis County next Tuesday may be reasonably expected to add 2,990 bushels to the product of the fields it will plant, as compared to fields planted with common seed. Figured at no higher price than $1.00 per bushel, the increase that may be rightly expected from the thirty-five carloads should amount to $104,650.00.

This shipment of potatoes comes direct from the producers in the Hollandale district of Minnesota, through cooperative marketing association, and will be received at the Florissant Valley cooperative elevator.

To mark the importance of this transaction between the farmers of one state and those of another a large number of potato growers and general farmers will meet at Angulm Tuesday morning. The time from 10 a. m. to 2:30 p. m., with an hour out for lunch, will be filled with talks by representatives of the organizations that have co-operated to bring about the successful handling of this mammoth shipment.

WILLIAMS FINDS COUNTRY PROSPEROUS.

United States Senator Is In Maryville Today—Arrives Too Late For Address To Teachers.

Roads made impassable by recent rains made it impossible for Senator George H. Williams to reach Maryville today in time to fill his engagement to speak before the closing session of the Northwest Missouri Teachers' Association.

Senator Williams was scheduled to speak this morning. He did not arrive until noon. He arrived in St. Joseph early this morning after a tour of the state and was to have been met there by Maryville friends and brought here by motor.

Together with former Governor Frederick D. Gardner, the Senator was a guest of honor at a luncheon given today at the Country Club. He expressed great regret that he had been unable to arrive in time to meet the teachers in convention here.

Senator Williams paid a tribute to Uel Lamkin, president of the college. "It was a great pleasure," he said, "to meet my old friend, Uel Lamkin, the president of your college, and to renew acquaintance with him and his family. He and I were born in the same town. Our parents were friends. He comes from a long line of educators, and, of course, fits naturally into his present great work."

In an interview later this afternoon, Senator Williams discussed the political situation in the state as he found it on his tour.

"At the invitation of Dr. E. B. Clements, national committeeman and of W. F. Phares, chairman of the state committee, and in company with them," he explained, "I have just finished a trip over the state. We have visited all the congressional districts and have met many people. We seem to be in an era of good feeling politically in Missouri. There has probably been nothing like it since the days of James Monroe.

"President Coolidge," the senator asserted, "is very popular with all classes in our cities, irrespective of politics. Our people believe in him and believe in his fixed and definite purpose to cut down the expenses of government—to reduce taxes, to simplify government and to limit the activities and powers of the federal government.

"It has been a very hard but a very happy trip. I shall soon go on to Washington, where hard work of a different type is awaiting me."

Senator Williams came here from Independence and will return tonight to his home in St. Louis. While here he is a guest in the home of Chairman Phares.

MAN'S WORK FOREVER FELT

FORMER GOVERNOR GARDNER GIVES ADDRESS TODAY.

AMERICA IS AN IDEAL

Primary Function Of Public Schools Is To Teach Appreciation Of Privilege Of Citizenship.

"An institution is but the lengthened shadow of a man," Frederick D. Gardner, former governor of the state of Missouri, told the teachers who attended the meeting of the Northwest Missouri teachers this morning in the College auditorium. "We have but to read history to find overwhelming proof of that fact. However, the statement cannot be taken entirely without reservation," he added.

Judahism was referred to as the lengthened shadow of Moses, the great lawgiver of the Hebrews, and that shadow is still holding the Hebrews in one solid unit despite the fact that they are scattered throughout all lands, the former governor said. Alexander the Great was cited as another example.

The reforms in Russia by Peter the Great were referred to as the shadow of that sovereign and this shadow is now being overcast by another one in Russia, that of Lenine, according to Mr. Gardner. Militarism, the shadow of Frederick the Great, spread throughout Prussia until it resulted in the World War.

The shadow of the lowly Nazarene has now spread over 565 millions of peoples in the world, the speaker said by way of final illustration. "It is a shadow that grows by night and by day. Not a single university exists but what is in a Christian country," he concluded.

Washington's Shadow.

The great body of American ideals of today are but the long shadow of our first president, George Washington, the former chief executive asserted. He also thinks that the shadow cast by the life of Abraham Lincoln will never grow dimmer.

"However, in considering the American ideals as the shadow of Washington we must not forget that, in accepting my first statement with reservation, we must give some credit to the thousands of his unknown contemporary patriots," Mr. Gardner reminded his hearers.

Jefferson's Shadow.

"The shadow of Thomas Jefferson is the American public school system although that idea did not originate with him," Mr. Gardner said in speaking of education in America.

According to him the public school idea first originated in England but there is one fundamental difference between the English and American ideals of public education. The English schools are open to the children of all British subjects providing they can pay the tuition fee. English schools are not supported by public education as our schools are.

The prime function of the American public school is that it teaches American ideals to fit children for the high duties and privileges of American citizenship, Mr. Gardner believes. That function of the school is the supreme obligation of the teacher.

Governmental Ideals.

The speaker gave three broad ideals of government that have grown up in the world so far. The first is the ideal of despotism which arose in the Orient and is now wholly confined to the Orient. In it the will of the ruler is unquestioned.

In opposition to this ideal, came the Greek ideal of the limited monarchy which made the monarch a law observer as well as a law maker.

It remained for America to produce the third ideal government by which the individual participates in erecting the laws by which he is governed. All authority is traceable to the individual in the American ideal. "America is not a country, it is a state of mind," Mr. Gardner affirmed.

It lies with us to determine what our shadows shall be, Mr. Gardner said. "Shall it disappear like the dew after the rising sun or shall it lengthen? The answer lies with you," he concluded.

DIVER TELLS OF S-51 SUBMARINE DISASTER.

STEAMER IS SPEEDING

Radio Operator, Receiving S. O. S., Testifies Before Court Inquiry Behind Closed Doors.

Boston, Oct. 17.—That the steamship City of Rome and the ill-fated submarine S-51 were steaming in the same course, that the coastal liner was making more speed than the submarine and that when the undersea craft started to swing starboard the City of Rome rammed her was the gist of the testimony today of James W. Ingram, deep sea diver, before the naval court of inquiry probing the disaster which cost thirty-three lives off Block Island.

Ingram, the first diver to go down, described in detail the condition of the undersea craft. The diver said he found the submarine at the bottom of the ocean, lifted slightly to port. All hatches except the coning tower hatch were closed. There was a long cut on the port side indicating that the City of Rome had struck the S-51 aft.

Ingram said he stamped on the deck but there was no sound from within.

Whitcomb P. Ouray, wireless operator of the Tropical Radio Co., the first to get the wireless S. O. S. of the disaster, gave his testimony behind closed doors.

NEW PARLEY WITHIN YEAR

SECURITIES AGREEMENT PAVES WAY FOR DISARMAMENT.

NATIONS TO ARBITRATE

Great Britain Would Welcome Invitation From America To Enter Another Conference, Officials Say.

Washington, Oct. 17.—An arms conference, aimed to accomplish what the original Washington conference left undone, was regarded here today as virtually certain perhaps within the next year.

President Coolidge is ready to issue the invitations just as soon as he is assured that the nations of Europe and Asia are willing to come in.

The signing of the Locarno security pact under which France and Germany and their neighbors agree to abolish warfare among themselves has in his opinion removed the last obstacle to the success of such a meeting.

The chief aims to be sought in the second Washington conference are expected to be:

Reduction of the world's standing armies, limitation of aircraft, limitation of submarines both as to size and number that each nation may possess, and limitation of those classes of auxiliary naval ships that the first Washington conference left untouched.

London, Oct. 17. — Great Britain would welcome an invitation from the United States to a disarmament conference now that the European securities pacts have been concluded at Locarno, it was stated in official circles today.

Washington, Oct. 17. (United Press) —The European security pact which is being completed today at Locarno is viewed here as a document of immense interest to the United States, although this country has not participated in the conference deliberations in the little town of Switzerland. Its immediate importance is its influence on another disarmament conference which is regarded certain to ensue.

The agreement will be the fulfillment of the League of Nation's disarmament project rather than that of President Coolidge. Mr. Coolidge long ago anticipated this through a White House announcement that he was interested in disarmament no matter who promoted the meeting. He is believed to be gratified by the Locarno pact because it will tend to hasten new arms limitation discussions. Because of this prospect of a new arms parley, the Locarna agreement has a bearing on the international debt situation. If European debtors of the United States reduce their armament expenditures as a result of the pact, it is held here they will be in a better position to settle their debts to the United States.

President Coolidge's proposed conference probably would have discussed cruiser, submarine and aircraft limitation on which no action was taken by the 1921 meeting. The European disarmament problem and the one which the League summons is expected to take up, is that of land siarmament, which is almost entirely a European problem. This country's army has been reduced to a minimum and consequently the United States has nothing to trade in such a meeting.

American Merchant Fleet Being Urged

Is Great Institution Up to 60 or 70 Years Ago— Government Operates Ships At Loss.

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

Washington—Why can't the United State make a success of merchant sailoring?

Congress undoubtedly will try to find an answer to this question next winter, as a result of President Coolidge's quarrel with the shipping board. A half-hearted attempt to answer it was made, through a House of Representatives investigating committee, about a year ago. Practically nothing was accomplished and finally the inquiry died a natural death.

America's merchant fleet was a great institution up to 60 or 70 years ago.

It gradually dwindled away, due to the fact that there was a greater field for enterprise in opening the west than in navigation. Thence the country ran along for decades, hiring the British and others to do its ocean carrying, until the war broke out.

The war gave the foreign vessels so much to do for their own governments that they couldn't bother with American business, which suddenly found itself with no means of supplying its shipping requirements.

Of course Americans began ship-building at once, but it takes time to create a merchant fleet.

Nevertheless, by the time the war ended, the fleet was on hand, a rather crude affair, for the most part, but capable of steaming from port to port with cargoes and passengers on board.

At this point the nation discovered that it had forgotton how to run ships profitably.

The trick of making merchant shipping pay has got to be rediscovered, if the United States is to have what it wants—a privately owned mercantile marine.

The government can go on operating the ships at a loss, but this isn't a satisfactory arrangement and private concerns won't take over the job—not and foot the bills. So Congress' task is to find out why the government can't make the business yield returns, as it does in other countries.

Mrs. J. F. Hull and daughter, Elizabeth, returned last night from Trenton where they visited their son and brother, Ray Hull, advertising manager of the Trenton Times, for a few days.

The frame building which has stood near the southwest corner of the square for several months, and has been occupied by Snodgrass meat market, has been moved to the northeast corner of Buchanan and Third streets where J. C. Snodgrass has opened up a nice and commodius meat market.

The Worth County Times has this to say of the Old Settlers Reunion at this place: "The old settlers reunion at the Maryville fair was the most successful of any yet held in Northwest Missouri. The fair likewise was a success in every particular. Many from this county were in attendance and all came away well satisfied that it was good to be there."

We are requested by Prof. J. M. Hunt to announce that he will have a singing at the Baptist Church in this city on Tuesday, the 19th inst. at which time classes will be organized in vocal music both for advanced students and beginners.

The photograph gallery formerly occupied by C. W. Briggs, Esq., on the north side of the square was moved from its foundation last Monday, placed on a couple of wagons and taken down to his residence on Third street, where it will be utilized for same purpose.

It will be gratifying news to the theater-goers and the lovers of the drama in this city to know that the celebrated Enoch Arden Combination, which played so successful an engagement here last winter, will commence a series of entertainments at Union Hall in this city on next Monday evening, the 18th inst., probably remaining all week. SLOW POISON.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Deeds have been made out for the lands bought for the Normal School, and all of said lands paid for. It took a little over $31,000 to do this.

The Maryville Seminary Board of Directors met Monday evening and formally turned over the property to the Normal School. The seats and other furniture in the building go with it. The books were given to the Carnegie Library.

The County Teachers' Association, Prof. Oakerson announces, will meet October 26, 27 and 28. State Superintendent Carrington, Rev. Linn, Rev. Homer Cook and Rev. J. A. Thompson of Tarkio are on the program.

The Carnegie Library Board has decided to open the library on Sunday afternoons, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock. It will be in charge on Sundays of Assistant Librarian Guy Curry.

Too much rain, but what are we going to do about it? It would not be fair to hold Weather Reporter Brink responsible and we can't get at the weather clerk.

The Maryville Public Schools will have no school next Thursday and Friday on account of the Teacher's Institute.

Cow and Not Pig Responsible for Football Games

Chicago, Oct. 16. (United Press)—More than a month in advance of its national convention here the publicity department of the American Leather prodneers swung into action with this announcement:

"Pigsking, as a synonym for football, is a terrible misnomer. Footballs are made of cowhide."

The announcement says, however, that the lowly pig had a lot to do with the football in its infancy. The first football was made of a pig's bladder. Later it was encased in the hide of the pig to make it more durable. But that was in the days when the sturdy lads of Devonshire punted their new toy about the town square.

For the last fifty years regulation footballs and basketballs have been made exclusively of cowhide.

Believe Prince Should Now Watch His Step

London, Oct. 17—Reports of criticism of the conduct of the Prince of Wales while in South America has reached here and it is understood that both the king and the government are inclined to believe that the heir to the throne should guard his way and at least not make amusement his apparent aim in life.

Heridity Important Factor in School

Kansas College President Calls Attention To Various Capacities Of Children In Grades.

Pres. W. A. Brandenburg of the Pittsburg, Kansas, State Teachers College in speaking before the teachers meeting yesterday spoke on some of the problems of heredity. "More attention ought to be given to the laws of heredity." He spoke of intelligence tests which showed that many people are of low or inferior intelligence. "Intelligence tests have given us some definite data," he said.

"Home fails to appreciate difference in ability. Parents often chide their children because they are not able to understand why they cannot make as good grades as other children. Some children have a rich mental inheritance and others have a poverty stricken intelligence yet we expect all to accomplish the same work." "Compliment both types," he advised, "for those of lesser ability often work harder."

"What are the different causes?" he asked. Dr. Brandenburg brought out there are 300,000 feeble minded, 334,000 insane and 250,000 epileptic which does not include many just on the border line and many who are not confined to the institutions.

"It is difficult to protect society against insane blood," he added. There are biological sins be affirmed and denounced the present practice of society in failing to segregate parents of these types.

"Blood will tell as much in the human family as well as in the animal family. Why can't we recognize this? he asked. We must learn that blood will tell and give attention to the problem."

"Emotional life is upset in America," declared Dr. C. A. Phillips this afternoon, before the rural teachers. He told of an example of a mother who cursed God because He was so mean as to take away her baby. "She had no education in control of emotions during a crisis," he added.

He lamented the way in which people must be "spasamed" up and thrilled up and stated that many people do not know what to do with themselves when alone as they have no control of their emotions.

Phases of art, literature, and dancing were brought out and the speaker showed where they might help or hinder the emotional control of the people.

Bloody Finger Prints Only Clue in Mystery

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 17.—Four bloody finger prints on the left side of an automobile in which Madeline Latimer of Milwaukee and James Sears, Kenosha garage man, were shot to death six miles north of here early today were discovered by Thad Logan and Emil Meissner, detective. A hurried call for a Milwaukee finger expert was sent in by police officials in the hope that the imprints may be those of the murderer, although many other hands have been permitted on the car since it was removed from the scene of the tragedy.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. Rath (W. J. Watt and Co.)

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

JOHN W. BROOKE, hardware manufacturer and widower, has arranged with Economy and Efficiency Corporation, Limited, to take over the management of his household. He leaves town without informing his three grown children, Constance, William and Alice, of his plans.

H. HEDGE, efficiency engineer, assigned to the job, arrives at the Brooke mansion and breaks the news to the surprised trio. His credentials proved genuine Hedge joins the family at dinner. He tries to make it clear that he is there as their father's representative and expresses the hope that they will soon be keenly interested in the experiment.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Experiment! The Brookes looked interested. What sort of an experiment?

But if Mr. Hedge was aware of the interest he did not at that time gratify curiosity. Instead, he branched off into things that were quite irrelevant, things that ordinary folks talk about. He was rather a good talker, yet he did not do all the talking. He managed to lead the Brookes into it, and presently they found themselves conversing with this strange person as though he were actually a familiar member of the household.

"Horace, do you realize that you waste too much energy?"

Dinner was proceeding with astonishing ease. Billy had thawed to the point where he took up his favorite amusement of teasing his sisters.

"By the way, Connie," he asked, "have you dad's letter there?"

She produced the letter, and her brother read it with solemn face.

"Down here it says, 'Treat him as you would me,'" quoted Billy.

There was a look of quiet amusement on Hedge's face.

"Well, why don't you, Connie?" demanded her brother.

"I—I don't quite understand," she stammered.

There was a flush on her cheeks, partly anger, partly confusion. Something was coming, she knew; she could have annihilated her brother.

"Don't understand?" echoed the demon. "Well, you know how you always treated father when he sat down at the table."

Constance was blushing furiously. Of course she knew! It was her invariable custom to kiss John W. Brooke on top of his expansive bald head. She blushed at the memory of this, and she blushed anew at the memory of her salutation to Hedge, back in the library, when, before she had glanced up from her magazine, she thought he was her father.

For an instant she contemplated flight. She dared not look across the table, where sat the person who was to be treated according to the injunction of her father. Alice suppressed a giggle; Billy was grinning. If Hedge was laughing, she would die.

But Hedge was not laughing. He did not appear to be conscious of the dire confusion of Constance. Instead, he was regarding the butler with a cold glare.

"Come here!" he commanded, raising an imperative finger.

The butler approached.

"Your name's Horace, isn't it?"

"Why—yes, sir."

"Then listen, Horace. I've been watching you. Do you realize that you waste from thirty five to forty per cent of energy every time you walk from that door to the table?"

"In the first place," continued Hedge, emphasizing his remarks with incisive gestures, "you take a longer route than is necessary. Take a direct route—so—and you save three steps. Lengthen your stride and you save two additional steps. Let me see you step out. There! You see it can be done. There are two equally short routes by which the table may be approached. Alternate them. It saves the rugs. Walk faster. It saves time. And turn down those lights along the wall. They're unnecessary and it will save electricity. After this evening, put only one log on the fire. It saves wood. That will do."

If the butler was frozen into an image of blank amazement, the same was equally true of the Brookes. They sat rigid in their chairs, staring at H. Hedge. Vanished was the agonizing confusion of Constance; vanished the diabolical glee of her brother and sister. No emotion touched them save that of superlative astonishment.

It remained for Billy to recover speech.

"What—what the blazes do you call that?" he demanded.

"That," said Hedge, quietly, "is a kindergarten lesson in efficiency."

"You mean that you are going to try—"

"Young man, you are beginning to get the framework of an idea."

There was an instant of silence in the dining-room, while Hedge placidly stirred his coffee. His amazing outbreak over the inefficiency of Horace subsided as rapidly as it arose. He had relapsed into a satisfied calm.

"Are we to understand," began Constance, coldly, "that our father told you—"

"Your father told me nothing. I have never seen him."

"Never saw him! Yet you mean to say that he sent you here?"

"He made full arrangements with the company of which I am a representative," replied Mr. Hedge. "The Economy and Efficiency Corporation, Limited. We have recently effected a reorganization of his business. We have, in his absence, now been placed in charge of his household."

"And you actually propose to live here?"

"I am living here," responded Mr. Hedge, sipping his coffee. "You must learn to separate a fact from a mere intention. My immediate personal effects I brought with me. My trunk will be here in the morning. By the way, Horace, did you take my grip to Mr. Brooke's room?"

The butler shook his head; speech had not yet returned to him.

"Do so at once or cause it to be done. I shall occupy Mr. Brooke's suite."

Horace glanced at Constance and hesitated. He received no sign that would serve as a guide to action, and presently disappeared from the room, his head wagging pitifully.

Constance bit her lips.

"May I venture to ask your plans?" she inquired.

"Certainly. They are simple. To make it brief, my plans are to put your father's household on an economic basis that will correspond to that on which his hardware establishment is now operated. I may say that these plans are also his, but the accomplishment of them has been turned over entirely to me. I shall, of course, expect your co-operation.

"And if we should decline to co-operate?"

"That is an impossible contingency."

Constance and her brother exchanged glances, and both of them looked at Alice. Here was a fool who had rushed in where an angel feared to tread; where even John W. Brooke, hardware magnate, often walked with circumspection.

"When I say that I expect your co-operation," continued Mr. Hedge in a less formal tone, "I may say that I can easily show you why we should co-operate. The science of eliminating waste and installing efficiency is a fascinating one. It possesses strong elements of romance."

Alice's eyes wore a hypnotic stare.

"Your father, although an unbeliever, recently became interested in it. I may now say that he is a strong advocate. His business has been completely reformed."

"Was there anything the matter with it?" demanded Billy.

"Over two hundred thousand dollars' worth of annual waste," said Mr. Hedge promptly. "We do not know, unfortunately, the annual waste of this household, but I understand that no accounting has been kept. However, that will be remedied. I should judge from a very casual inspection, that anything up to a fifty per cent saving may be achieved. In any event, the work will be one of great interest."

The son of the household had an angry exclamation on his lips, but Constance checked him with a sign. She was thinking rapidly. Instinctively she felt that the time was one for caution.

If there was to be a battle, it would be necessary to make the customary reconnaissances. She had carried with her the tiny bit of pasteboard which the visitor had handed her in the library; now she picked it up from the table and glanced at it idly. It was merely a play for time, but the successor of John W. Brooke was prompt in turning the trifling incident to account.

"If you will note my card," he said, "you will see that it is about one-half the area of the customary business card. That saves paper. You will note there is no superfluous 'Mr.' and that the Christian name is represented by an initial. That saves ink and type. A similiar saving is represented by the letters 'E. E.,' which serve adequately to designate the nature of my business. The entire card is supplied at a forty-two per cent reduction over the cost of the average business card. The matter may seem trifling; in reality, it is important. It is a primary step in scientific management."

"But what does E. E. mean?" asked Constance, studying the penurious scrap of pasteboard.

"Efficiency Engineer."

"It would seem," she observed critically, "that your card requires a verbal explanation."

"Possibly—to the uninformed," replied Mr. Hedge. "Even so, conversation is cheaper than paper and ink. You now understand what E. E. means; it will never be necessary for you to inquire again during the period of your natural life. But in the same period, if it were necessary to print 'Efficiency Engineer' in full on all similiar cards, the expense in paper and ink would doubtless run into thousands of dollars, to say nothing of the time and cost of composition. It would be an economic fallacy."

There was an unmistakable note of enthusiasm in the voice of Mr. Hedge.

NEXT CHAPTER: Scientific management under fire.

Old Shot Tower Is Gift From St. Joe Co.

Is Given To United States Daughters Of 1812—Mrs. W. R. Painter Is State Chairman.

Mrs. W. R. Painter of Carrollton, State Chairman of Historic Sites of the United States Daughters of 1812 reported to the State Council at Boonville the glorious acquisition of the "Old Shot Tower," a priceless gift from the St. Joseph Lead Company. The entire delegation rose their feet in gratitude and appreciation of this magnanimous gift.

The Old Shot Tower at Herculaneum, Jefferson county, overlooks the Mississippi River. From a cliff 150 feet high at this point lead was melted and dropped to make buckshot and bullets for the American Armies during the war of 1812 and helped Andrew Jackson's army to win the battle of New Orleans.

A painting of the Old Shot Tower by Oscar Burninghouse is among the historical pictures on the walls of the State Capitol at Jefferson City.

In November, 1809, this article appeared in the Gazette informing the Missouri public of the inauguration of a new industry:

"John N. Maclot having completed the erection of his Shot Tower at Herculaneum—the first in the west—gives notice to his friends and public that he will manufacture lead into drop shot on reasonable terms."

More than a half century after this announcement the scaffolding of the tower still projected over the edge of the limestone cliff. Travelers on the boats approaching or leaving St. Louis were told the story of this early enterprise.

John Nicholas Maclot was from Metz. He was in Paris just before the French Revolution. Suspected of republican sentiment, he suffered imprisonment in the Bastile. When released, he came to this country. After some mercantile experience in Philadelphia, he came to St. Louis with a stock of goods the year of the American occupation. The opportunity to make shot appealed to his inventive mind and he went down to Herculaneum.

Down in the lead mining district now termed the Lead Belt and Mine La Motte, the St. Joseph Lead Company owns many acres of land and is the largest lead mining company in the world. It was organized in 1864. The President, Mr. Clinton H. Crane, was chairman of the Lead Producers committee for war service, which handled the entire American lead production during the World War.

It is a singular fact that lead from this locality was mined and used in the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, Mexican War, the war between the States, the Spanish American War and the World War.

The St. Joseph Lead Company, the world's greatest lead mining organization, has given to the Resource Museum in the marble capitol at Jefferson City, a priceless collection of crystals. The wealth of Solomon's Temple could not reproduce the riot of tints and exquisite artistry of this magnificent collection, made from all parts of the known world.

The people of Missouri are to be congratulated on obtaining this rare collection.

The St. Joseph Lead Company's gift of the Old Shot Tower at Herculaneum with the bronze tablet to the United States Daughters of 1812 is a noble thing to do for our State, and Nation, for there is nothing from ocean to ocean more worthy of preservation, for its historical importance than the "Old Shot Tower" at Herculeum. A gift worthy of the doners, whose patriotism and gererosity have done so much for our state.

H. G. Wells Is Named in Injunction Suit

Canadian Woman Would Prevent Publication of "Outline of History" And Seeks $50,000 Damages.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 16.—H. G. Wells, British author, is the principal defendant mentioned in a writ issued at Osgoode Hall, in which Florence A. Deeks, Trouto, seeks an injunction restraining the publication and sale of "The Outline of History" and also asks $50,000 damages. The MacMillan Company of England, the MacMillan, Inc., of New York, and the MacMillan Company of Canada are mentioned as joint defendants.

Miss Deeks, in the writ, taken out today, seeks to restrain the publication and selling of "The Work purporting to have been written" by Wells, which Miss Deeks claims to contain in whole or in part, and without her consent, an unpublished literary composition or work known as "The Web."

Miss Deeks seeks mandatory injunction for the delivery or destruction of all books, also for an accounting for all sales of the "Outline."

Favorable Comments on Musical Programs

Teachers Well Pleased With Numbers Given By Conservatory Faculty And College Chorus.

Much favorable comment was made by the visiting teachers in Maryville from all of Northwest Missouri on the quality of the musical programs given at the sessions the last two days by all-Maryville talent.

Thursday evening the college chorus gave a splendid recital of selections from Handel's "Messiah." The audience showed itself to be very appreciative of the work of the chorus.

Yesterday morning Miss Dvorak and H. O. Hickernell of the faculty of the Conservatory of Music gave a recital of instrumental numbers that were very warmly applauded. Encores were demanded.

Friday evening the Teachers College entertained the visitors with a few selections before the speaking program. Probably every teacher will go home well impressed with the fact that Maryville is making a strong bid for the leadership in music in the state of Missouri.

Technical Discussions by Various Educators

Means Of Testing Students In High Schools Is Subject Treated By Dr. A. G. Capps.

In the sectional meeting of the high school teachers as a part o f the program of the teachers convention yesterday afternoon, discussions of a technical nature were given to the teachers by prominent educators from this and neighboring states.

"Mathematics in the high school curriculum" was discussed by C. H. Jamison, head of the department of mathematics of the Kirksville State Teachers College. The correlations and relations of this subject to the other studies in the curriculum were ably discussed.

Dr. A. G. Capps, University of Missouri told of means of testing in the high schools. Recall tests, completion tests, multiple response tests and essay tests were discussed and compared for the teachers.

Dr. J. W. Searson of the University of Nebraska gave the closing address of the sectional meeting on some of the problems peculiar to the high school teachers.

Says Mustache Is Not in Keeping With Court Dignity

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 17.—A federal judge cannot wear a mustache, no matter how magnificent it may be, and must grace his court with the proper dignity endowed with such an institution.

So Judge Harry A. Anderson of Memphis, here to assist in clearing a heavy federal court docket, has amputated what has long been conceded one of the most marvelous mustaches in the state.

"I regret to see it go," he said, "but I feel it was a duty, as a mustache is out of place, and undignified on the federal bench."

Kansas Aggies Have Early Lead Over K. U.

Fumble By Jayhawk Player On His Own Three-Yard Line Proves Costly—Teams Are Battling Even.

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 17.—A fumbled punt by Hamilton of the University of Kansas eleven on his own three-yard line gave the Kansas Aggies a 7 to 0 lead over the Jayhawks at the end of the first quarter of their annual game here this afternoon. McGee kicked the extra point. Except for this one play, the teams are evenly matched. The aggies have had the edge of the frequent punting exchanges.

Farm Clubs Discuss Contract Drive Plans

Meeting Held in Courthouse This Afternoon—Women to Hold Convention Next Week.

Another meeting of executive officers and representatives of the various clubs of the Missouri Farmers Association was held in the courthouse this afternoon to discuss plans developed since last week for bringing to a close the contract drive in which the association is engaged.

A meeting was held last week at which it was decided to refer the matter back to the clubs for further discussion. Bad roads kept down the attendance at today's meeting and another will be held next Saturday.

In connection with the meeting next week, the Women's Progressive Farmers Association, companion organization to the Missouri Farmers Association, will hold its annual county convention. Under present plans, it will be held in the auditorium of the State Teachers College during the forenoon. There will be a basket dinner at noon, and the two organizations will unite for an afternoon session.

The women's association will have a program and hold its annual election of officers. Mrs. Joe Meek of Jamesport will be the principal speaker. The chief speaker for the afternoon session will be C. D. Brown of Gallatin.

Arrangements for the convention and joint meeting are in charge of Mrs. W. L. Job, Sr., president of the women's association, and John osch of Pickering, secretary of the Farm Clubs in this county.

SOCIETY

Birthday Party.

About 150 persons attended the birthday party which the Ladies Aid Society of the First Methodist Church gave last night in the basement of the church. Almost all of the guests came in costumes, being dressed to represent a song, book, some country, a cartoon, etc. The prize for the best costume, an angel food cake, was awarded to Mrs. Jesse F. Robertson. Entertaining features included readings by Edna Bell Welborn and Mrs. Guy Mutz, a mock wedding, and a play "The Burglar Alarm," presented by several girls. Gingerbread and coffee were served. The proceeds, amounting to $48 will be used for kitchen equipment.

Ladies Aid Society.

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Methodist Church held its monthly meeting Thursday afternoon at the church. The report of the treasurer was given and announcement was made of a gift of $50 per year by a friend until the society's pledge of $7,000 to the church building fund has been paid. Mrs. D. W. Snoderly, secretary of the society for seven years, resigned and Mrs. George Pat Wright was appointed to fill that office. Mrs. J. P. Price will succeed Mrs. Charles Stilwell as head of division number three. Plans for a three-act comedy to be given in January were discussed. The members voted to dedicate the large north window in the new church building to Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Ford and a smaller window downstairs to Judge I. K. Alderman, the oldest member of the church. About twenty-five members were present.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Grains finished strong and higher on the Board of Trade today. As has been the case for the past week, wheat again led in the upturn.

General buying in wheat had its incentive in unfavorable outside crop news. Reports from the continent, Australia and Argentine, told of severe drough and frost damage. Shorts covered and no commission houses evened up but leaders averse to making extended committments without some indications of impending developments, held back.

Locals ruled corn. They were disposed to be bearish. Strengths in wheat created enough buying to send prices fractionally higher.

Oats held practically unchanged on a dull and neglected market.

Provisions rallied on short covering.

GREAT VICTORY FOR BEARCATS

DOWN KIRKSVILLE BULLDOGS 12 TO 3.

SHOWS STAYING POWER

Local Teachers College Eleven Strengthens When Necessary And Is Aggressor In Homecoming Battle.

A tired Bearcat rests today. Stretched out in his lair he tenderly licks the scratches of a mighty battle, while in his eyes lingers the light of victory. Occasionally he growls as he thinks of a struggle to the end, a struggle from which he emerged the conqueror.

Yesterday the Bearcat met the Bulldog, a foe from Kirksville. Garbed in moleskins they fought for sixty minutes while many more than a thousand spectaters cheered them on. For half of the battle neither scored decisively, but shortly after a fifteen-minute intermission the Bulldog caught his teeth in the Bearcat's throat and wounded him to the extent of three points.

Perhaps this made the Bearcat angry. At any rate he waited, and later, in the last fifteen minutes of the combat, he launched his victorious drive. Once, and then again he downed the Bulldog, each time scoring six points by the rules. Each time, however, the Bulldog wrenched himself free before an additional point could be given.

No one can say that the victory was not deserved. Starting from the first, the Bearcat was the aggressor. It was his steady drive which kept the battle continuously in the Bulldog section of the arena. When the visitor would threaten, the Bearcat would strengthen, and, just when defeat seemed imminent his great courage would keep him from danger.

That is the story of a football game. A homecoming game, if you please. Yesterday Bearcat and Bulldog met to settle a contest of long standing. Next year they will meet again.

No clearer insight may be given on the sportsmanship of the game than a recollection of the action of the two captains. During the game they played opposite one another. After the game they met in the center of the field.

"Fairly won, England. You deserve it."

"Thank you, Barker. It was clean all the way."

The credit for the victory can go to no one individual. However, one cannot help recalling that the sturdy legs of "Ikey" Eads carried the ball around the ends repeatedly, and at one time through the line for the first touchdown, when Kirksville was leading by a three-point margin.

But then there was "Weenie." A slippery ball meant nothing and his work at safety was of dry-field calibre. Time and again he took Kirksville punts and then, with tacklers immediately upon him, squirmed and wriggled, to be brought down ten or fifteen yards later.

And Search, the boy who intercepted a pass in the last moments of the game and raced thirty yards for a touchdown. Of course credit is due him.

While in the line they all played well. Captain England led his team as only a captain should, and there was no man who did not perform with credit to himself.

"Bunk" Miller, an experiment at end, is that no longer. Lawrence has found the right wing of his team. Going down on punts with the speed of a Locke, shifting through interferance with the uncanny ability of a Weir, tackling with the deadly accuracy of Clyde Smith, he was a power in all departments of the game.

One need only to look at a summary of first downs to realize that the best team won. Eleven times the Bearcats made the distance, while Kirksville contented herself with but one. Perhaps the Kirksville punts were longer, but those of Maryville were more accurate, gaining maximum placement without an exception.

Twenty-two men were used by Frank Lawrence. The game ended with a fresh Maryville team on the field, but at that, a winning team.

The officials of the game cannot go unmentioned. Haley, the referee, Anderson, the unpire, and Gharrett, the head linesman, were fair, accurate and exacting. This made a clean game.

Springfield and Warrensburg Win

Games Played on Muddy Fields—Missouri Wesleyan Breaks Long Losing Streak.

Springfield proved to be the best mudders yesterday when they played McKendree College from Lebanon, Ill., by a 19 to 9 score. Missouri Wesleyan broke its long losing streak by defeating Missouri Valley 21 to 7. Bourette and Shultz of Missouri Wesleyan starred. Warrensburg won a close battle in the mud with Central College, the final score being 6 to 0. The game was played in mid field and neither team gained consistantly.

Mrs. J. E. Loveil of Bedford, Ia., was in Maryville yesterday.

MAYSVILLE IS AGAIN VICTOR

DUSE STARS IN 12 TO 0 WIN OVER MARYVILLE.

LOCALS SHOW FIGHT

Once again the Maysville gridsters strut—for yesterday the Maysville High School team emerged victorious over the Maryville High School football team, the fourth consecutive year that they have toppled the Maryville football hopes, this time by a 12 to 0 score.

No alibis or excuses are offered by the returning team, for none are needed. The Maryville players fought hard and gave all they had to beat the Maysville team but a triple threat combination of Mud, Duse and Breaks of the game, could not have been overcome on the football field yesterday.

The Maysville touchdowns were direct results of Duse, the fleet backfield star of the Maysville team. At the start of the game Duse gave evidence of being one of the dominant factors of the game, by catching the Maryville kickoff and running 60 yards down field. At this point the Maryville defense braced and held the strong Maysville eleven.

In the last minute of the second quarter Duse again started a sensational run by receiving the Maryville punt and racing 40 yards down field for a touchdown.

The Maryville team appeared to be far from downhearted by the sudden scoring of Maysville and in the second half started a brand of offensive football that was far superior to any that was displayed by Maysville.

The Spoofhounds lacked the scoring punch although they kept the Maysville team continually on the defense. As the end of the fourth quarter drew near Maryville encountered another hard luck streak by fumbling the ball on a punt. The kicker was behind the goal line and it was getting dark. The minute Maryville fumbled the ball the alert Maysville ends pounced on the oval and scored a touchdown.

The Spoofhound team scored 13 first downs as compared with 5 for Maysville during the game. It rained during the entire game and was nearly dark before the final whistle blew.

On the trip to Maysville, the bus in which the Spoofhounds were making the trip got stuck in a mud hole. A team of horses was unable to pull the bus out of the mud but the Spoofhounds got behind the car and succeeded in gaining a victory over the mud.

The team did not arrive until 2:30 o'clock and the game did not start until 4 o'clock. A banquet was given after the game by Maysville people.

The Maryville lineup—Holt, le; Howard, lt; New, lg; Curfman, c; Nichols, rg; Hall, rt; Alsup, re; Cockayne, qb; Smith, rhb; Bratcher, lhb; Kissinger, fb. Substitutions—Tindall for Curfman, Strong for Bratcher.

About 50 high school rooters accompanied the team to Maysville.
